War Minister Cites Armed Forces Unity

Leftist Goulart Center Of Dispute Over Presidency

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) War Minister Gen. Odylio Denys announced Sunday Brazil's armed forces are united and determined to put down any difficulties arising from a dispute over succession to the presidency vacated by Janio Quadros, a volatile conservative. The announcement - made as leftist Vice President Joao Goulart headed home from Singapore for swearing in as chief of state -appeared to mean the military leadership has at least temporarily taken control, or is heading in that direction.

Simultaneously, the foreign ministry suspended negotiations for restoration of diplomatic relations, broken in 1947, between this nation of 67 million and the Soviet Union. These negotiations had been reported virtually complete.

Military To Keep Order

"The army, navy and air force," Denys said, "are united in watching over the nation's general tranquility. United we shall face the difficulties that will occur for the preservation of public order."

Potential difficulties include the announced opposition of some political and military leaders to Goulart, a Communist-supported Labor Party critic of U.S. capitalism, and a Laborite threat to form a separate government in southern Brazil if Goulart is denied his constitutional right to

Intelligence Blunder Could Lead To War

Military and diplomatic intelligence - that mysterious land of intrigue and fictionized spy exploits - has lost some of its glamor as a result of cold war bunglings.

The super - secret Central Intelligence Agency, center of United States intelligence efforts, has been exposed to ridicule as a result of two of the most elementary blunders.

It was completely inaccurate in sizing up the Cuban situation prior to the invasion fiasco, and it was caught flat-footed in communication with the African rebels fighting French President de Gaulle.

Again, in the recent Korean governmental upheaval, confusion in Washington officialdom over what Korean faction to back indicated a lack of prior notice of unrest in the important Asian outpost.

Other incidents, including the U2 flights and defections of important British intelligence workers to Russia, have embarrassed Western intelligence efforts. But more important than being caught in uncomfortable spy episodes is the question in many official and unofficial minds today-

Is the West without reliable inside data on crucial happenings inside the enemy camp at what might be the most critical point of the cold war?

But it is obvious from the surprise of the Cuban developments and the unexpected firmness of the West in refusing to budge in Berlin that the vast Soviet spy network has its exasperating moments also. And therein lies the nightmare which frightens so many officials: that the war nobody wants could be triggered by misunderstanding the intent of the other side.

Export Licenses

Business is business but the security of our nation is more important. At the present time, the United States has an embargo on exports to Soviet Russia, Red China, Cuba and other Communist countries. This embargo is in the national interest. Congress has passed the Export Control Act with a view to protecting the national interest

The Secretary of Commerce is charged with the execution of this act and under it he issues licenses confidentially unless it is, in his judgment, in the national interest to make such information public. There are some who believe that all data concerning these licenses, including the name of the person or firm that applies for and received the license should be made public. The Secretary of Commerce, Luther H. Hodges, disagrees with this point of view. He holds:

"By identifying individual business firms, along with other pertinent data, vital information reflecting the trade and commercial position of each company would be revealed. This in turn could and likely would in many instances lead to disruptions of the normal competitive relationships between the many business firms in the export business, and could very well result in reducing the nation's export business at a time when it should be expanded. In addition, I feel that publication of trade information as to individual firms would particularly be of potential damage to the smaller companies in the export business which are in the process of developing their overseas markets and gaining a toehold in a highly competitive business activity.'

It seems to me that this is a specious argument. The American people are entitled to know what American firms are trading with the enemy and why. There may be a sound reason for such trade but we should know about it. The American people are also entitled to know what American firms have exported capital to European and Asiatic countries with the object of building plants which can trade with the enemy without

The publication of such information would not only startle people generally but would shock the stockholders of such companies who would suddenly discover that the enterprise which they own is engaged in trading with the enemy. Some of them may not believe that dollars are worth that much.

Secretary Hodges also says: 'A point of more substance and I think of greater significance is that - from the national interest - the vital information is not what particular company has been licensed to export, but what decision has been made by the government to authorize what commodity to be exported to what country! In terms of the public interest and what should be of public concern it is far more important to know what commodity or item the government has approved for export to what particular country than it is to know the name of the individual business firm that has applied for and received an export license.'

The issue here, it seems to me, is not what is more or less important. It is rather that everything is important. The American people are entitled to know everything that goes on in this country and whatever affects them. The Berlin situation is a demonstration of the stupidity of secrecy and of the objection to criticism and debate. The more that is made public, the fewer will be the mistakes made in the interest of those who want government to serve particular rather than general welfare.

It is true that Secretary Hodges can point to his predecessor who set up the precedents which he is following. However, it is to be noted that we are today paying a very heavy bill contracted by these same predecessors who failed to protect American interests. They were among those who made it possible for Soviet Russia to build a new industry on the gifts from the United States, amounting to $11,000,000,000 during the war period and how much more has yet to be calcu-

The time has come to let the cat out of the bag, Let us know everything about what has been done to the economy of the United States during the past three blighted decades. GAGRI. Georgia, USSR. Premier Khrushchev in an exhaustive discussion of the problems of peace and war now facing the United States and the Soviet Union made a flat proposal to guarantee the future freedom of West Berlin with a token force of American, British, French, and Soviet troops.

He said: "I should like to know what the Western powers would reply to the following concrete proposal: let the United States. Britain, France, and the Soviet Union jointly give a solemn pledge to respect and protect, the freedom, independece, and rights of the free city of West Berlin!" He emphasized that troops should be small in number, that there must be no interference with the people of West Berlin by any outside power, and that under such agreement there would be complete access to West Berlin over the territory of East Germany.

But if a peace treaty with East Germany is not signed by the former Allied powers, Khrush-

WASHINGTON

The question is raised by the death, the other day, of the Abbe Henri Breuil. Only the closest students of the obituary pages will have noticed Breuil's passing. Yet Breuil extended human history, almost single - handed, by something like 15,000 years.

The continuous extension of history is one of the strangest, least noticed, and most notable processes of our time. Most of it has occurred since Breuil himself was born into a French magistrate's family, some eighty-four years ago. It was then generally supposed that exactly 5881 years had elapsed since the Creation.

Had not the learned Archbishop Ussher calculated that the first day of all days, when "God said let there be light," occurred in 4004 B.C.? In 1887, most people still believed Archbishop Ussher.

Yet the Abbe Breuil was still gently, tenuously living when it authoritatively announced that Zinjanthropus, the human predecessor found by Dr. L. S. B. Leakey in the fossil-rich Olduvai gorge, had walked the African earth no less than 1,750,000 years

It is an amazing transformation, a dizzying shift of focus that has thus been taking place. And Breuil's share in this transformation did not have to do with only half-human creatures like Zinjanthropus. If Zinjanthropus had perchance survived somewhere on the face of the earth, he would quite surely now be meeting the fate of the white rhino and all the other large wild animals which are in such imminent danger of extermination - by - civilization. Breuil instead added to the story of the exterminators - of men capable of civilization.

One should perhaps say that Breuil's haroes were civilized men, rather than men who were merely capable of civilization. Those who have seen the marvellous Lascaux Cave or the majestic, bison-painted roof of the Altamira cavern will have their own ideas on this point. At any rate, these people of the upper Paleolithic age were men no different from the modern races of men. Their means of livelihood - the slaughter of the vast herds of wild game which then wandered the earth - was no more brutish than the means of livelihood of many a modern millionaire. They had their gods - the Abbe Breuil was the first to trace the probable pattern of their hunting magic. And they created the first great art ever created by the all-creating, all-destroying hand of man.

In the task of ushering back into history these first creators, the Abbe Breuil had his forerunners. Brouillet, an attorney of Vienne, found his deer-engraved Paleolithic bone fragment as early as 1840. In 1879 the twelveyear-old daughter of a local Spanish landowner cried, "Look, fathpite greatly heightened tension in Berlin over Communist efforts to close East Germany's "escape hatch," highest foreign policy experts do not believe the situation will explode into war.

However, they do believe that the residents of East Berlin might stage some strong demonstrations which could result in bloodshed and rioting in their efforts to show the outside world that they are not suppine in their Iron Curtain

Meanwhile events in East Berlin and East Germay are considered in Washington as confirmation of a basic weakness of Communism-its inability to win over the allegiance of its own people. As things now stand. Russia's war-torn empire in Eastern Europe is a military liability.

In the event of an outbreak of military action, Russian troops would have to be used extensively to keep the populations in line in most countries in the area. Even

EXPERTS OPTIMISTIC - Des- so, troop and supply lines between the Russian homeland and any fighting front along the East-West European border would fall under constant harassment by guerril-

> Any suci uprising would encourage similar activity among most of Communism's satellites. It could easily become so serious as to jeopardize Russia's whole network of postwar controls and make deep inroads, not only in her military capability, but in her economic sttructure, as well. According to American experts.

> it is this set of circumstances that stands as a deterrent to Khrushchev's unleashing of military activity over Berlin. The reasoning is that Khrushchev will not fight if he is knowingly running a risk of anything more than a "brushfire" or small war. However, at the same time, Mr. K. knows that the guerrilla warfare he can expect would minimize his chances to win a small war and therefore bring pressure on him to expand it into a big one.

er, look at the painted bulls" and thus rediscovered the Altamira bison lost for eon after eon in the cavern's darkness.

But Breuil himself, in his young manhood, found the fantastic sanctuaries of Font de Gaume and Combarelles. Breuil alone, a scholar-priest only twenty - four years old, confronted the formidable scholarly synod at Montauban in 1901. Breuil alone persuaded his elders, there gathered to condemn him as a charlatan, to condemn instead those who doubted the cave-art. And from that day until the day of his death, Breuil was the pre-eminent recorder, analyst, and savant of the art and culture of the caves.

It may be, indeed, that the tracings and wash - drawings in Breuil's majestic corpus of work will one day be our only record of much of this first art of men. For it is not good for the caves, forgotten for so many millenia, to be visited once more by men. The air of the outer world is cruel to to the frescoes of Nero's golden house in Rome, which were rediscovered just in time to be seen and imitated by Raphael, but are wholly invisible to modern eyes.

Discovery, in truth, is too often the prelude to destruction. From the Greek collections of the Emperor Hadrian, no single fragment survives, unless it be the Ludovisi throne. From the 4,000 paintings in the catalogue of the Emperor Hui Tsung, only a handful have escaped the catastrophes of the succeeding centuries.

But the two emperors merely searched for relics of their own cultured pasts. We have searched into, we have partly re-created the whole past, from Altamira to Mohenjodaro, from An Yang to Palenque. And now that the time scale of history has been extended to unimagined limits, and every long-forgotten human culture has been unearthed and explicated, what will happen next?

"And if, as the American press says, force will be used, that "We are ready to agree to these guarantees being reinforced by The man who guides the desthe presence in West Berlin of tiny of 220,000,000 Soviet people token troops of the United States. and the largest land masses in Britain, France, and Soviet Union, the world made this new proposal These should be small in number for solving the Berlin crisis beside -literally token troops-because a swimming pool overlooking the no large numbers of armed forces Black Sea, where he recently enwill be necessary to guarantee tertained John McCloy, President free-city status.

"In this case agreement could be reached with the government of the German Democratic Republic (East Germany) regarding freedom of communication for those military contingents.

"That in effect sums up our position on the German question,' Khrushchev concluded. "That is what we are calling for. I should emphasize again and again that we are striving for elimination of vestiges of World War Two. We want the atosphere in Europe and may breathe fresh air; so that all therefore throughout the world to become purer; so that all nations countries shall live as good neighbors; so that they shall build peaceful relations with one another; so that human beings shall live without fear of war.

"It is for this reason that the Soviet government and other Socialist countries have finally decided not to postpone any further signing of the German peace treaty. We shall regret it if the Western powers should not wish to join us. But in that event we shall be compelled to sign a peace treaty with the German Democratic Republic alone.

"You ask when it would be desirable to hold negotiations. The answer is that the solution permits no delay. We are therefore ready any moment to meet with the leaders of Western powersif they sincerely desire to achieve a realistic settlement of the German problem on a mutually acceptable basis."

ROME. Italy-This city is always exciting and excitable. It is a place where time stands still, and yet everything is in motion. I've been here before, and always I go to St. Peter's and the Colosseum and the tomb of Caesar Augustus, and the same sense of history falls across my shoulders, uplifting and depressing at the same time. Rome is the most beautiful of them all, and is conscious of it. It's a city of contrasts. There are 2,400 churches here and about the same number of wild orgies. The men hoard women as philatelists do stamps. On the Palatine Hill, where Nero stood to watch the city burn, beatniks in tight jeans pass the bottle around as they make wisecracks about the ancient Roman senate.

The best place to sit and watch people is at Doney's sidewalk cafe. It runs across the front of the Hotel Excelsior, where the rich Americans stay. The tables are small, and they line both sides of the sidewalk. The tourists sit here for a late drink and a good look. In time, everyone in Rome passes under the bright lights of the hotel.

The women, in a word, are the best dressed in the world. The diversification of style makes the eyeballs drunk. The dresses are brilliant in color, and range in style, all the way from the waistacross-the-hips of the 1920s to the new high hemline, which makes some women loo kas though they some women look as though they the skirts

The men wear ultra-short jackets, no ties, shirts unbuttoned almost to the waist, no undershirts, hands in trouser pockets, and stare at the ladies. They stare hard and insolently. Their reasoning is that there is no use to waste time on good manners when time is so short.

We spend our days driving around the city, and our nights at Doney's watching the crowds. There was a time, only six years ago, when Gayle and I were here and we could not get spaghetti. Rome frowns on pasta. The headwaiters refer to it as a peasant hetti, the chef cooked a small dish of it and put a pat of butter on top. Now, times have changed. The Americans, who love spaghetti, have forced Rome to alter its opinion.

Last night at dinner, broad macaroni and fresh stewed tomatoes were the appetizer.

Three blocks east on the Via Veneto is the first pizzeria I've seen in Rome. Alfredo, the King of Fettucini, has a well-patronized restaurant on the Piazzo

Augusto Imperatore. His bar is lined with autographed photos of American movie stars with their faces full of macaroni. I wanted to take Kelly to dinner at the Hosteria dell Orso. the cave of the bears, but the owners selected this time to redecorate. It is an ancient place at the bottom of a cobbled alley. and it is proper to go there in an open barouche. Dell Orso goes back to the 15th century, when knights and princes dined and wined and sang all night.

The place is the same. Dinner is served by candlelight and a string ensemble plays love songs and sometimes sings in fractured English. However, she-a close now, so I've been looking for a White Tower.

One of the items which has not changed is the driving. The people kill each other with mad gusto. The taxi drivers love to barrel down the middle of that white line. This isn't so bad, except that they do it in both directions and the Rome Daily American keeps a box score of the deaths.

As they approach each other at high speed, the drivers do not use horns because horns could not be heard. By day and by night, they flash the headlights at each other, and then wait to see which one will chicken out. The best way to ride a taxi in this city is to relax with hands over both eyes, murmuring an Act of Contrition or some suitable prayer for the dying.

Morning in Rome is always a special treat. The pale curtains lift inward on the breeze, and fall back into place. The sun is bright and there is a sweet odor in the air. The grass spangles with dew and the beds of growing flowers lift their heads a little higher, to get a good look at the people.

Trying to get a waiter to understand me is something else. I like breakfast served in the room and this man is short and correct and practically sings "Buon giorto us. He insists that he speaks English. If he does, I've been working 50 years on another language.

After much pantomime, and hissing "si si" at each other, he grins until his gums show and says: "Ah, corna flakkess - uf cuss!" Or "How you like-a de ponna cakess - hot?" Then, much bowing, much self-deprecation, and he backs out. Fifteen minutes later, he is back with a tray, triumphantly producing something he likes to eat.

It is possible, in time, to forget any city but Rome . . .

Drugs That Dilate The Coronary Arteries

By Dr. Theodore R Van Dellen

The nitrites and nitrates are used daily by millions of persons with heart disease. These drugs relieve chest pain (angina pectoris) following exertion or an emotional disturbance. They increase the flow of blood to the cardiac muscle by relaxing or dilating the narrowed coronary

Scores of different nitrites and organic nitrates are on the market. The rapid acting are utilized in angina and the best of these is nitroglycerine. This little tablet is placed under the tongue, where it dissolves immediately,

WASHINGTON (AP) - Rocky Colavito boomed four home runs, three of them in the second game. as the Detroit Tigers swept a 7-4. 10-1 doubleheader from the Washington Senators Sunday and moved to within two games of the American League lead.

The double victory enabled the second-place Tigers to gain a half game on the league-leading New York Yankees, who beat Kansas City 8-7 in a single game.

The Tigers settled things early in both games against the Senators, who now have lost 12 of 17 to Detroit while splitting even in 14 contests with New York.

Detroit ran up a 7-1 lead in the opener with the aid of a solo homer by Colavito, two triples by Dick McAuliffe, a three-bagger by Jake Wood and a double by Norm

Mrs. Henry Johnson Scores Ace On 6th At Country Club

Mrs. Henry Johnson, who won the club championship on Friday, earned more laurels yesterday at the Cumberland Country Club when she shot a hole-in-one on the 175 yards sixth while playing in a four-some with her husband and Mr. and Mrs. James Truka.

Mrs. Johnson used a No. 5 wood to chalk up her ace, the sixth recorded at the CCC this season which tied a previous high for total holes-in-one in one year.

It was Mrs. Johnson's first ace since she started playing golf 11 years ago. Her medal score in the match was 77.

Other players who shot aces this year were Bob Robinette (No. 18), Paul Owens and Charles Giornesto (No. 6), Carroll Boggs (No. 10) and Raymond Cannon (No. 15).

How 45,000 companies help their employees buy security

The average American company is pretty busy tending to its own business. Yet many companies have sandwiched in a valuable service for their employees—the Payroll Savings Plan for U.S. Savings Bonds.

Through this plan, your payroll clerk sets aside a certain amount each payday for Bonds, buys them, and arranges to get them to you. It's completely automatic, and the easiest way in the world to save.

Save as much or as little as you wish

Employees can sign up to save as little as $1.25 a week. The average among the more than 8 million folks on the Plan is $20 a month.

All in all, 45,000 companies help their employees save about $2 billion in Savings Bonds a year—a lot of future homes, vacations, college degrees, and nest eggs for retirement.

The security built into Savings Bonds

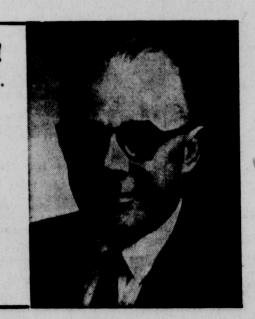

U.S. Savings Bonds are guaranteed by the Government to grow. $18.75 becomes $25 in 7 years, 9 months. In 10 more years, it becomes $36.25. Your Bonds can be cashed in anytime, with interest. And if they're lost or destroyed, the Treasury Department replaces them free.

Every Savings Bond you buy is an investment in Peace. What better way to help your government help you enjoy the things you're saving for.

Hats off to American Industry!

"American Industry has given the Savings Bonds Program its greatest success," says William H. Neal, National Director of the Treasury's Savings Bonds Program.

"45,000 American companies have sold many billions of dollars in Savings Bonds—at no cost to the taxpayer," says Mr. Neal. "By operating the Payroll Savings Plan, these companies, big and small, are helping to keep our country strong. At the same time, they're helping more than 8 million people save automatically for the things they want. America owes a vote of thanks to these companies for their outstanding contribution to the 20-year success story of the U.S. Savings Bonds Program."

Carnegie Fund Asks Data On Rescue Attempt

Jack Rowe Cited In Drowning Case

The Carnegie Hero Fund Commission has asked Lt. Donald H. Smith of the Cumberland Police Department to supply details concerning the efforts of Jack Rowe, 17, Ridgeley, to save the life of a West Side boy who drowned in Wills Creek on June 6.

Donald G. Sink, assistant manager of the commission, informed Lt. Smith the attention of the fund has been called to the act performed by the Ridgeley High School senior.

Youth Rowe dived repeatedly into the murky waters of Wills Creek, beneath the Western Maryland Railway trestle, before lo cating the body of Stephen Eugene Lease, 10-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer C. Lease Jr., 216 Beall Street.

Had Been Diving

Lt. Smith informed the commis sion that young Rowe, who appeared to be an average swimmer, was wading in the water up to his chest when he recovered the body, but had been diving in deeper water for about five minutes before he located the lad.

In response to a query as to whether assistance was available, Lt. Smith said police by that time were on the scene with gear, and that Daniel Fradiska, 40, McMullen Highway, was in the water nearby, swimming and diving in attempts to locate the boy.

Cites Undertow He said the rescue attempt was made by young Rowe at considerable danger, since deep holes existed in the area which had been excavated for the flood control project, and the undercurrent was very strong.

There was no way, he said, for Rowe to know how deep the holes

Lt. Smith also recounted how Mr. Fradiska began attempts to revive the boy with a mouth-tomouth resuscitation tube, and how he and Detective Kenneth Morrissey alternated with the device for about 50 minutes in an unsuccessful attempt to revive the boy, who had been in the water for about 15 minutes.

Civil Defense Unit Does Not Endorse Shelter Builders

Because of the recent upsurge survival items, the Maryland Civil Defense Agency has issued a statement regarding "approval" Local Police According to the announcement, the agency does not approve or endorse any firms or individuals of builders and commercial items. engaged in shelter building and does not endorse any specific brands of survival items for sale.

War Minister Cites Armed Forces Unity

Leftist Goulart Center Of Dispute Over Presidency

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) War Minister Gen. Odylio Denys announced Sunday Brazil's armed forces are united and determined to put down any difficulties arising from a dispute over succession to the presidency vacated by Janio Quadros, a volatile conservative.

The announcement - made as leftist Vice President Joao Goulart headed home from Singapore for swearing in as chief of state -appeared to mean the military leadership has at least temporarily taken control, or is heading in that direction.

Simultaneously, the foreign ministry suspended negotiations for restoration of diplomatic relations, broken in 1947, between this nation of 67 million and the Soviet Union. These negotiations had been reported virtually com-

Potential difficulties include the announced opposition of some political and military leaders to Goulart, a Communist-supported Labor Party critic of U.S. capitalism, and a Laborite threat to form a separate government in southern Brazil if Goulart is denied his constitutional right to the presidency.

Intelligence Blunder Could Lead To War

Military and diplomatic intelligence - that mysterious land of intrigue and fictionized spy exploits - has lost some of its glamor as a result of cold war bunglings.

The super - secret Central Intelligence Agency, center of United States intelligence efforts, has been exposed to ridicule as a result of two of the most elementary blunders.

It was completely inaccurate in sizing up the Cuban situation prior to the invasion fiasco, and it was caught flat-footed in communication with the African rebels fighting French President de Gaulle.

Again, in the recent Korean governmental upheaval, confusion in Washington officialdom over what Korean faction to back indicated a lack of prior notice of unrest in the important Asian outpost.

Other incidents, including the U2 flights and defections of important British intelligence workers to Russia, have embarrassed Western intelligence efforts. But more important than being caught in uncomfortable spy episodes is the question in many official and unofficial minds today-

Is the West without reliable inside data on crucial happenings inside the enemy camp at what might be the most critical point of the cold war?

But it is obvious from the surprise of the Cuban developments and the unexpected firmness of the West in refusing to budge in Berlin that the vast Soviet spy network has its exasperating moments also. And therein lies the nightmare which frightens so many officials: that the war nobody wants could be triggered by misunderstanding the intent of the other side.

Export Licenses

Business is business but the security of our nation is more important. At the present time, the United States has an embargo on exports to Soviet Russia, Red China, Cuba and other Communist countries. This embargo is in the national interest. Congress has passed the Export Control Act with a view to protecting the

The Secretary of Commerce is charged with the execution of this act and under it he issues licenses confidentially unless it is, in his judgment, in the national interest to make such information public.

There are some who believe that all data concerning these licenses, including the name of the person or firm that applies for and received the license should be made public. The Secretary of Commerce, Luther H. Hodges, disagrees with this point of view. He holds:

"By identifying individual business firms, along with other pertinent data, vital information reflecting the trade and commercial position of each company would be revealed. This in turn could and likely would in many instances lead to disruptions of the normal competitive relationships between the many business firms in the export business, and could very well result in reducing the nation's export business at a time when it should be expanded. In addition, I feel that publication of trade information as to individual firms would particularly be of potential damage to the smaller companies in the export business which are in the process of developing their overseas markets and gaining a toehold in a highly competitive business activity."

It seems to me that this is a specious argument. The American people are entitled to know what American firms are trading with the enemy and why. There may be a sound reason for such trade but we should know about it. The American people are also entitled to know what American firms have exported capital to European and Asiatic countries with the object of building plants which can trade with the enemy without

The publication of such information would not only startle people generally but would shock the stockholders of such companies who would suddenly discover that the enterprise which they own is engaged in trading with the enemy. Some of them may not believe that dollars are worth that much. Secretary Hodges also says:

'A point of more substance and I think of greater significance is that — from the national interest — the vital information is not what particular company has been licensed to export, but what decision has been made by the government to authorize what commodity to be exported to what country! In terms of the public interest and what should be of public concern it is far more important to know what commodity or item the government has approved for export to what particular country than it is to know the name of the individual business firm that has applied for and received an

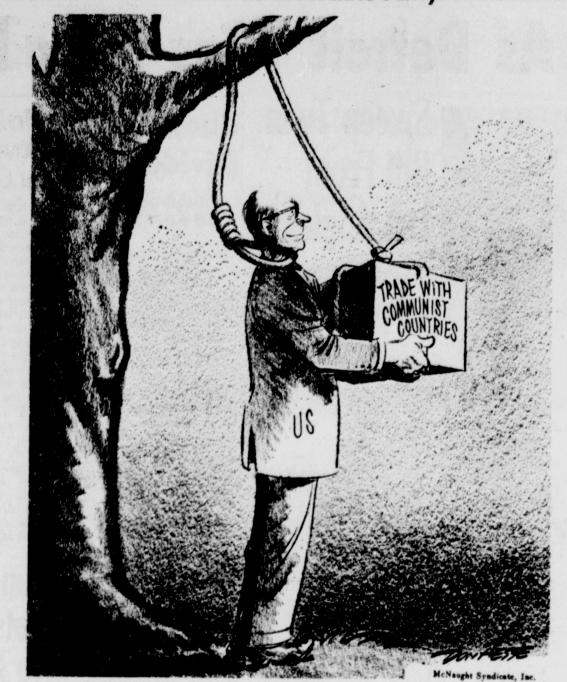

The issue here, it seems to me, is not what is more or less important. It is rather that everything is important. The American people are entitled to know everything that goes on in this country and whatever affects them. The Berlin situation is a demonstration of the stupidity of secrecy and of the objection to criticism and debate. The more that is made public, the fewer will be the mistakes made in the interest of those who want government to serve particular rather than general welfare.

It is true that Secretary Hodges can point to his predecessor who set up the precedents which he is following. However, it is to be noted that we are today paying a very heavy bill contracted by these same predecessors who failed to protect American interests. They were among those who made it possible for Soviet Russia to build a new industry on the gifts from the United States, amounting to $11,000,000,000 during the war period and how much more has yet to be calcu-

The time has come to let the cat out of the bag, Let us know everything about what has been done to the economy of the United States during the past three blighted decades. The more the people know the readier they will be to stand up in support of their government at this critical moment. We have been told of what progress we have made. Where is the progress?

Pearson Interviews Khrushchev, Hears 'New' Proposals On Berlin

(Editors Note: Drew Pearson today reports on his interview with Premier Khrushchev of Kussia, an interview in which the Soviet leader made new proposals which might lead to a solution of the deadlock over Berlin. Today's report includes a formal summary of Mr. Khrushchev's views, given to Mr. Pearson in English by the Soviet leader after their discussion was concluded.)

GAGRI. Georgia. USSR. Premier Khrushchev in an exhaustive discussion of the problems of peace and war now facing the United States and the Soviet Union made a flat proposal to guarantee the future freedom of West Berlin with a token force of American, British, French, and Soviet troops.

He said: "I should like to know what the Western powers would reply to the following concrete proposal: let the United States, Britain, France, and the Soviet Union jointly give a solemn pledge to respect and protect, the freedom, independece, and rights of the free city of West Berlin!" He emphasized that troops should be small in number, that there must be no interference with the people of West Berlin by any outside power, and that under such agreement there would be complete access to West Berlin over the territory of East Germany.

But if a peace treaty with East Germany is not signed by the former Allied powers, Khrushchev said, then Allied access to West Berlin could be assured only on the basis of arrangements with the East German Government over whose territory the Allies would have to pass.

Elaborating on this point, Khrushchev told me, "You are now sending fifteen hundred additional troops to West Berlin, and under present arrangements you can do this. But after a peace treaty is signed and an American colonel seeks to transport his troops across East Germay. He will be told no! Occupation has ended! You have no right to transport troops across this territory, either by land, by sea, or by air

"And if, as the American press says, force will be used, that means war.'

The man who guides the destiny of 220,000,000 Soviet people and the largest land masses in the world made this new proposal for solving the Berlin crisis beside a swimming pool overlooking the Black Sea, where he recently entertained John McCloy, President Kennedy's disarmament advisor. Peaceful Mood

The sea, which extends down to Turkey and the famous Bosporus outlet to the Mediterranean over which so many wars have been waged, looked very peaceful in the afternoon sunlight. And Khrushchev on the whole was in a peaceful mood. He kept repeating over and over again that his country and his government wanted peace. But he also made it absolutely clear and repeated it several times that Russia would definitely and categorically sign a peace treaty with East Germany. He hoped the United States would join.

"But," he said, "Whether you join us or not we are going to sign such a treaty. If you will join us that will bring the greatest happiness to our two peoples.

'We fought together. We routed the Hitlerites together. Let's work in peace together," Khrushchev

Our conversation lasted several hours during which the man who probably wields more individual power than any other government leader in the word talked with nostalgia about his meetings with ex-President Eisenhower, praised John Foster Dulles reguarding his latter-day view on Germany, told how he refused to release the RB-47 fliers during last year's U. statements afterward, and said that he had many letters from the Red Army wanting to remain on for another "hitch" because of the Berlin war clouds.

Because Khrushchev was introducing some new ideas on Berlin and because of the touch-and-go nature of the Berlin crisis, Khrushchev had written and handed me after our talk the English translation. And because of their importance, I am making this text available to all newspapers in the United States. Summarizing his views, Khrushchev said, "Let us sign a peace treaty. Let us establish a freecity status for West Berlin. Let us provide it with necessary guarantees. We are moreover ready ourselves to participate in exercising those guarantees.

"We are ready to agree to these guarantees being reinforced by the presence in West Berlin of token troops of the United States. Britain, France, and Soviet Union, These should be small in number -literally token troops-because no large numbers of armed forces will be necessary to guarantee free-city status.

"In this case agreement could be reached with the government of the German Democratic Republic (East Germany) regarding freedom of communication for those military contingents.

"That in effect sums up our position on the German question," Khrushchev concluded. "That is what we are calling for. I should emphasize again and again that we are striving for elimination of vestiges of World War Two. We want the atosphere in Europe and may breathe fresh air: so that all therefore throughout the world to become purer; so that all nations countries shall live as good neighbors: so that they shall build peaceful relations with one another; so that human beings shall live without fear of war.

"It is for this reason that the Soviet government and other Socialist countries have finally decided not to postpone any further signing of the German peace treaty. We shall regret it if the Western powers should not wish to join us. But in that event we shall be compelled to sign a peace treaty with the German Democratic Republic alone.

"You ask when it would be desirable to hold negotiations. The answer is that the solution permits no delay. We are therefore ready any moment to meet with the leaders of Western powersif they sincerely desire to achieve a realistic settlement of the Ger-

According to American experts, it is this set of circumstances that stands as a deterrent to Khrushchev's unleashing of military activity over Berlin. The reasoning is that Khrushchev will not fight if he is knowingly running a risk of anything more than a "brushfire" or small war. However, at the same time, Mr. K. knows that the guerrilla warfare he can expect would minimize his chances to win a small war and therefore bring pressure on him to expand it into a big one.

the cave-paintings, as it was cruel to the frescoes of Nero's golden house in Rome, which were rediscovered just in time to be seen and imitated by Raphael, but are wholly invisible to modern eyes.

Discovery, in truth, is too often the prelude to destruction. From the Greek collections of the Emperor Hadrian, no single fragment survives, unless it be the Ludovisi throne. From the 4,000 paintings in the catalogue of the Emperor Hui Tsung, only a handful have escaped the catastrophes of the succeeding centuries.

But the two emperors merely searched for relics of their own cultured pasts. We have searched into, we have partly re-created the whole past, from Altamira to Moheniodaro, from An Yang to Palengue. And now that the time scale of history has been extended to unimagined limits, and every long-forgotten human culture has been unearthed and explicated, what will happen next?

Rome is the most beautiful of them all, and is conscious of it. It's a city of contrasts. There are 2.400 churches here and about the same number of wild orgies. The men hoard women as philatelists do stamps. On the Palatine Hill, where Nero stood to watch the city burn, beatniks in tight jeans pass the bottle around as they make wisecracks about the ancient Roman senate. The best place to sit and watch people is at Doney's sidewalk cafe. It runs across the front of the Hotel Excelsior, where the rich Americans stay. The tables are small, and they line both sides of the sidewalk. The tourists sit here for a late drink and a good look. In time, everyone in Rome passes under the bright lights of the hotel.

The women, in a word, are the best dressed in the world. The diversification of style makes the eyeballs drunk. The dresses are brilliant in color, and range in style, all the way from the waistacross-the-hips of the 1920s to the new high hemline, which makes some women loo kas though they some women look as though they the skirts.

The men wear ultra-short jackets, no ties, shirts unbuttoned almost to the waist, no undershirts, hands in trouser pockets, and stare at the ladies. They stare hard and insolently. Their reasoning is that there is no use to waste time on good manners when time is so short.

We spend our days driving around the city, and our nights at Doney's watching the crowds. There was a time, only six years ago, when Gayle and I were here and we could not get spaghetti. Rome frowns on pasta. The headwaiters refer to it as a peasant

When Gayle insisted on spaghetti, the chef cooked a small dish of it and put a pat of butter on top. Now, times have changed. The Americans, who love spagnetti, have forced Rome to alter its opinion.

Last night at dinner, broad macaroni and fresh stewed tomatoes were the appetizer.

One of the items which has not changed is the driving. The people kill each other with mad gusto. The taxi drivers love to barrel down the middle of that white line. This isn't so bad, except that they do it in both directions and the Rome Daily American keeps a box score of the deaths.

As they approach each other at high speed, the drivers do not use horns because horns could not be heard. By day and by night, they flash the headlights at each other, and then wait to see which one will chicken out, The best way to ride a taxi in this city is to relax with hands over both eyes, murmuring an Act of Contrition or some suitable prayer for the dying.

Morning in Rome is always a special treat. The pale curtains lift inward on the breeze, and fall back into place. The sun is bright and there is a sweet odor in the air. The grass spangles with dew and the beds of growing flowers lift their heads a little higher, to get a good look at the people

WASHINGTON (AP) - Rocky Colavito boomed four home runs, three of them in the second game, as the Detroit Tigers swept a 7-4, 10-1 doubleheader from the Washington Senators Sunday and moved to within two games of the American League lead.

Mrs. Henry Johnson Scores Ace On 6th At Country Club

Mrs. Henry Johnson, who won the club championship on Friday, earned more laurels yesterday at the Cumberland Country Club when she shot a hole-in-one on the 175 yards sixth while playing in a foursome with her husband and Mr. and Mrs. James Truka.

Mrs. Johnson used a No. 5 wood to chalk up her ace, the sixth recorded at the CCC this season which tied a previous high for total holes-in-one in one year.

It was Mrs. Johnson's first ace since she started playing golf 11 years ago. Her medal score in the match was 77.

Other players who shot aces this year were Bob Robinette (No. 18), Paul Owens and Charles Giornesto (No. 6). Carroll Boggs (No. 10) and Raymond Cannon (No. 15).

How 45,000 companies help their employees buy security

The average American company is pretty busy tending to its own business. Yet many companies have sandwiched in a valuable service for their employees—the Payroll Savings Plan for U.S. Savings Bonds.

Through this plan, your payroll clerk sets aside a certain amount each payday for Bonds, buys them, and arranges to get them to you. It's completely automatic, and the easiest way in the world to save.

Save as much or as little as you wish

Employees can sign up to save as little as $1.25 a week. The average among the more than 8 million folks on the Plan is $20 a month.

All in all, 45,000 companies help their employees save about $2 billion in Savings Bonds a year—a lot of future homes, vacations, college degrees, and nest eggs for retirement.

The security built into Savings Bonds

U.S. Savings Bonds are guaranteed by the Government to grow. $18.75 becomes $25 in 7 years, 9 months. In 10 more years, it becomes $36.25. Your Bonds can be cashed in anytime, with interest. And if they're lost or destroyed, the Treasury Department replaces them free.

Every Savings Bond you buy is an investment in Peace. What better way to help your government help you enjoy the things you're saving for.

Hats off to American Industry!

"American Industry has given the Savings Bonds Program its greatest success," says William H. Neal, National Director of the Treasury's Savings Bonds Program.

"45,000 American companies have sold many billions of dollars in Savings Bonds—at no cost to the taxpayer," says Mr. Neal. "By operating the Payroll Savings Plan, these companies, big and small, are helping to keep our country strong. At the same time, they're helping more than 8 million people save automatically for the things they want. America owes a vote of thanks to these companies for their outstanding contribution to the 20-year success story of the U.S. Savings Bonds Program."

Carnegie Fund Asks Data On Rescue Attempt

Jack Rowe Cited In Drowning Case

The Carnegie Hero Fund Commission has asked Lt. Donald H. Smith of the Cumberland Police Department to supply details concerning the efforts of Jack Rowe, 17. Ridgeley, to save the life of a West Side boy who drowned in Wills Creek on June 6.

Donald G. Sink, assistant manager of the commission, informed Lt. Smith the attention of the fund has been called to the act performed by the Ridgeley High School senior.

Youth Rowe dived repeatedly into the murky waters of Wills Creek, beneath the Western Maryland Railway trestle, before locating the body of Stephen Eugene Lease, 10-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer C. Lease Jr., 216 Beall Street.

Had Been Diving

Lt. Smith informed the commission that young Rowe, who appeared to be an average swimmer, was wading in the water up to his chest when he recovered the body, but had been diving in deeper water for about five minutes before he located the lad.

In response to a query as to whether assistance was available, Lt. Smith said police by that time were on the scene with gear, and that Daniel Fradiska, 40, McMullen Highway, was in the water nearby, swimming and diving in attempts to locate the boy.

Cites Undertow He said the rescue attempt was made by young Rowe at considerable danger, since deep holes existed in the area which had been excavated for the flood control project, and the undercurrent was very strong.

Lt. Smith also recounted how Mr. Fradiska began attempts to revive the boy with a mouth-tomouth resuscitation tube, and how he and Detective Kenneth Morrissey alternated with the device for about 50 minutes in an unsuccessful attempt to revive the boy, who had been in the water for about 15 minutes.
